THE WAR ON WANT

War on Want is not like most other charities. War on Want seeks to eradicate the causes of world poverty, rather than simply treat the symptoms.

That's why when you give money to War on Want, you know it will be used to fund practical and progressive projects and campaigns which get to the root of the problem in Britain and in the Third World.

You can also become a member of War on Want for just £5. Or get your trade union branch to affiliate.

War on Want members take part in policy making, and help decide who will benefit.

Karl Marx
Economic and Philosophic Manuscripts of 1844

The 1844 Manuscripts contain Marx's foremost statement of his youthful humanism. It was in this work that Marx began to elaborate in materialist terms the Hegelian concept of 'alienation', revealing its origin in the capitalist economic system, as well as illustrating in vivid and impassioned language its faithful consequences for the social formation of the individual. Alienation is a theme which recurs throughout Marx's work.

This new paperback edition enables readers to study at source the original elaboration of the theory.

DON'T MISS THE SOCIALIST SOCIETY SUMMER SCHOOL

University of London
Union Malet Street, London WC1
September 10, 11 & 12

The resurgence of militarism, the decline of the traditional labour movement and the new virulence of reactionary ideologies all challenge socialist approaches and progressive optimism about the future.

Yet there are signs of radical renewal, in the new Peace Movement, in the growing influence of socialist feminism, in Labour's new left, in the renewal of socialist strategies in Europe.

The SOCIALIST SOCIETY's first Summer School has as its unifying theme the search for a viable socialist programme for Britain today.

Below are just a few of the questions to which we will be seeking answers at the courses and sessions of the Summer School.

What is happening to British politics? Has the mould broken? Can or should Labour remain united? How might Socialism again become a political force? What should be done about the police and the armed forces? How much of the Welfare

State should we defend? What is the crisis in education? How will a new socialist educational movement respond? What alliances should socialists be working for? Workers divided – why and for how long? What does it mean to be an invisible woman? Can the AES deliver democratic socialisation? The media – who do they say we are? What is a socialist strategy for the media? Culture as resistance – what are the prospects? How might Europe ban the bomb? How should Britain relate to the communist countries? How can we meet the challenge of militarism and impoverishment in the Third World?

Plus a full programme of evening events including debates, films, theatre and live music.

Full attendance (3 days) £10 / £5 unwaged, per day £4 / £2 unwaged.

MARX AND MARXISM

PETER WORSLEY

Key Sociologists

Peter Worsley discusses the major varieties of Marxism, from the official ideology of the state in the Soviet Union and China, to its application in the West, where Marxism has taken root as the major theoretical critique of capitalist society. He distinguishes between those ideas that remain valid and those that are contestable, and he concentrates on the uses to which Marxism has been put, rather than treating it purely as a philosophy in the abstract.

THE POLISH CHALLENGE

BBC correspondent Kevin Ruane traces the extraordinary events which have convulsed the Polish nation since July 1980. He gives a remarkable day-by-day account of the explosive rise to power of the trade union Solidarity, its battle against the authorities and the events leading up to the imposition of military rule.

The book draws on a wealth of material from the Polish media, recorded and documented by the BBC's Monitoring Service.

There is a foreword by Norman Reddaway, and factual appendices which include the text of the historic Gdansk Agreement.
