LENIN LIVES!

The Lenin Cult in Soviet Russia
 NINA TUMARKIN

When Lenin died in January 1924 the process by which the founder of Bolshevism was subtly transformed into a demigod had been under way for some time. The growth of the Lenin cult was in part spontaneous, with its roots in peasant culture, Orthodox ritual, and the peculiar history of the revolutionary intelligentsia. That it was also a planned operation by a postrevolutionary regime using culture for political ends is tellingly documented in this book. May 1983, illustrated, £16.00

The VOICE of the POOR

Essays in Economic & Political Persuasion
 JOHN KENNETH GALBRAITH

Galbraith considers the historical process by which the rich lands have moved to their present affluence, a process relevant to the poor countries as they seek political, cultural, and industrial development. Then he looks at the political, military and economic relationships between the great powers and the new states and considers what advice the poor nations should give the more fortunate. April 1983, £7.20

There was once a very conventional worker who caught the 7.53 every day and read the Daily Depressed. He believed that political thinking should be left to leaders, that wars are caused by "human nature", that profits are a reward for initiative, and that Marxism has something to do with Krenlin foreign policy. Then, one day, this worker missed the 7.53, jumped on to the 8.04 and found a copy of the Socialist Standard lying on a seat ... From that day to this, there has been no turning back ...

YOU TOO COULD MISS THE TRAIN TO NOWHERE AND READ THE CASE FOR THE SOCIALIST ALTERNATIVE

The Socialist Standard is the longest standing working-class journal in Britain. Consistently since 1904 it has presented a uniquely revolutionary response to the problems of poverty, war, unemployment and racism. Every month for just 30p, the Socialist Standard is full of clear and readable analysis of society. The Socialist Standard looks at issues such as the MEDIA, WOMEN'S MOVEMENT, TRADE UNIONS, HUNGER AND HOUSING from the point of view not of the government or the nation, but of the majority across the world who have to work for wages or salaries. Not just opposing the private capitalism of the West and the state capitalism of the East, the Socialist Standard presents the practical alternative of world socialism, in which production would be for use, not profit, and the means of production would be held in common and be democratically controlled.

The Politics of Penal Reform

Mick Ryan

Publication June 1983

For many years the penal system has been in a state of crisis. Mick Ryan analyses and locates the problem in its post-war context, and follows the steady decline in confidence about the potential of prisons or Borstals to reform or rehabilitate offenders.

He takes a critical look at the institutional processes which have helped to shape penal policy, and includes an assessment of the role of Parliament, the political parties and public opinion. Changes in the penal system are linked throughout the book to wider political and economic changes, arguing that only this link can explain the present position. The historical perspective provided by this book will prove invaluable to probation officers, prison officials and policy makers alike.

BANG GOES ANOTHER KIDNEY UNIT.

A kidney unit costs about £15,000. They won't say what an air-to-air missile costs. But a simple anti-tank missile is about £7,000.

And it's not just kidney units that are going up in smoke.

The Government spends nearly eight times as much on defence research as medical research.

And that's the least of your worries.

Newly built hospitals are keeping wards shut because the Government won't give them enough money to run properly.

Since 1979 Government policies have forced 90 hospitals to close down.

Over 13,000 beds have gone out of the window since 1979. Common sense will tell you there aren't 13,000 fewer sick people.

If everyone who's waiting for an operation were to stand in one long queue, it would stretch for close on 200 miles.

But none of this really has to happen.

This Government claims we haven't got any more money to increase spending on the health service.

Want to know the real truth?

It just isn't high enough on their list to warrant the extra cash that's needed.

Defence is. And that is why from 1981 to 1984 spending on defence will have risen by 30%.

For a country that isn't supposed to have any money, don't you think it's amazing what we're spending it on?
