WHAT IS SAID ABOUT THIRD WORLD BOOK REVIEW

■ TWBR sets out to be serious without being pedantic; wide-ranging without being morally indifferent; concerned with style as well as content.

Ronald Segal, Publisher/Author

■ TWBR is a publishing initiative which draws attention to the intellectual and creative output of the Third World and promotes a more informed discussion of the issues which confront developing countries and the world's response to these issues.

Ramphal, Secretary-General, Commonwealth Secretariat.

■ I believe TWBR will become necessary reading for all those concerned in the fundamental issue of north-south relations, in its political developmental and informational aspects.

Neville Maxwell, Senior Research Officer, Oxford.

■ TWBR is the kind of journal no serious academic, journalist, student, or anyone interested in Third World Affairs can afford to miss.

Peter Worsley,
Professor Emeritus, Manchester University.

I find it very interesting and think it will be of considerable use to all those concerned with the problems of the Third World.

William Clark, President IIE

■ We are impressed by TWBR's style and content.

Methue

■ TWBR is an impressive journal.

Pengui

■ I think TWBR is extremely well-produced and laid-out. It contains a consistently stimulating set of high quality articles. I am sure it will be a success and will provide a much-needed forum for serious discussion of Third World issues which will nonetheless be popular enough to attract an audience well beyond the normal academic journal.

Gavin Kitching, Development Economist

■ The appearance of this journal, in my judgement is an intellectual and a publishing event. The journal is very intelligent in conception, and you have managed to associate with it some of the most solid and interesting scholars of the Third World.

Professor Yaw Twumasi, University of Michigan

FEATURES

7 Ratecap Resistance -Interview with David Blunkett

We are on the eve of rate-capping. And the rate-capped authorities remain united in opposition. What will happen?

12 Back in the USSR: the past catches up • Monty Johnstone

The USSR has not achieved the ambitious objectives it set itself over two decades ago. Only widespread reforms can tackle the malaise.

19 Ponting's Legal Torpedo • John Griffith

The Ponting verdict was a blow for democracy. And all the better for being unexpected.

23 Jaw-Jaw and War-War -Paul Rogers

The Geneva talks are about to commence. But the obstacles are formidable and expectations low.

28 Striking the Right Note • Pete Carter

A most extraordinary industrial dispute, the most remarkable this century, but what strategic lessons can be drawn from the miners strike?

THE BATTLE FOR LONDON

Francis Wheen

The Battle for London is on! Before Ken Livingstone, 'local government' was a phrase that made people yawn. The GLC changed all that. The Battle for London explains the issues at stake.

Francis Wheen, a presenter for the BBC's News Stand, sets out the facts and the options—and lets you decide.
