FEATURES

6 West on the Dole-Goran Therborn

Unemployment dominates the West. Yet the experience of some countries, which have managed largely to avoid it, suggests that mass unemployment is not inevitable. But if we fail, the social map of our societies is likely to be transformed. A Brazilian scenario could be the outcome.

12 Who'll get Pleasure from Leisure? • Simon Frith

Leisure is being transformed. It's becoming more important in people's lives and an industry in its own right. But what kind of leisure will it be?

15 Strained Greens- Interview with Petra Kelly

The West German Greens have burst onto the European political stage in the last decade. But is now looks as if their meteoric rise could be at an end.

21 Smashing the State: Thatcher's radical crusade
Andrew Gamble

Who would have guessed? A Tory government deciding to reform the state. And that's exactly what's happening.

29 Infertility-a suitable case for treatment?
Marge Berer

Infertility has become a major political issue. The Powell Bill may have fallen, but the Left urgently needs to decide where it stands.
