FOCUS |

Recycling Famine

Paddy Coulter analyses the new crisis in Ethiopia and the West's response. Were the appeals of 1984-85 made in vain?

Health Service:

The new government white paper lacks both bite and conviction

Kerala:

The south Indian state with a new Communist government but an uncertain future

Cricket:

Who's been caught out in the umpiring test?

Housing:

No shelter from the Tory revolution

Communist Party:

A breakaway is on the horizon

James Baldwin:

a political appreciation

LETTERS

Rethinking defence, tv violence and Stuart Cosgrove's mum strikes back

FEATURES

Reaganism For Ever?

The 1988 presidential election could mark a watershed in US politics. David Plotke asks whether the Reaganite tide is turning

14

Whose Right To Life?

The Alton bill presents a new challenge to the pro-choice lobby. Wendy Savage, Jo Richardson, Teresa Gorman and Jane Woddis discuss what lies behind it

20

A Race to Exclusion

The latest immigration laws are vindictive. Dave Cook, Fiona Mactaggart, Bernard Misrahi and Habib Rahman outline an alternative approach

24

Lessons in Standards

Kenneth Baker's education bill has shattered the postwar consensus. Andy Green sketches out a new strategy for the Left

REVIEW OF 87

36-57

Culture and Politics: It's been all change in the arts. While

Anthony Barnett takes stock of the political world

Fashion: Sarah Mower examines the economics of the rising hemline

TV: Making the news in the media

Drama: David Edgar examines the boom in musicals, plus profiles of Dennis Potter and Emma Thompson

Books: Reading between the political lines

Sport: On and off the field, 1987 has been a challenging year

Aids: A culture-shock

Music: Stuart Cosgrove rewinds the loud sounds of 87; why Simon Rattle has been striking the right note; the death of Red Wedge

Film: Derek Malcolm ushers out another good year

Soviet culture: The glasnost guide to films and books
