COMMUNITY PARTY IN TRANSFORMATION

An Invitation to Take Part in a Unique Moment in History . . .

Founded in 1920 the Communist Party has played a fascinating role in the development of British politics. It is a party with a proud history of struggle and sacrifice.

Recently the party has focused on the future, constructing a politics fit for that future, one that challenges the timidity of labourism and the elitism of leninism.

The agenda for this politics will be developed and debated at what may prove to be the final congress of Britain's Communist Party and the culmination of its transformation. At the congress in November it will vote to decide how this final phase will be enacted and how the Democratic Left process will come into being.

The special nature of this congress will be marked by a debate on the evening of 22nd November - 'The Signs of the Times Debate' - where leading political figures drawn from the UK and Europe will discuss the future of the left and democracy.

To ensure your place at these debates simply fill in the form below, you can attend in person or we will send you a full report of the discussion immediately after this historic weekend.

Feminism Confronts Technology

JUDY WAJCMAN

This controversial new book looks at the impact of technology on women's lives, questioning stereotypes depicting women as technologically incompetent. Also questioned is the idea that the problem lies in men's monopoly of technology as a characteristically male phenomena.

Essays on Women and Culture
JANET WOLFF

This book integrates material drawn from a variety of sources - feminist theory, cultural and literary analysis, sociology and art history - in an original and accessible discussion of women's relationship to modern and postmodern culture. Janet Wolff explores both women's experience of modernity and their invisibility in both sociological and literary accounts of the subject.

Engendering Democracy

ANNE PHILLIPS

This original work brings together recent trends in feminist political theory and applies them directly to the problems of democracy. Exploring the under-representation of women in politics, and the relationship between public and private spheres, amongst other issues, this is a major contribution to one of the central political issues of our age.

Post-16 Education Centre

MA Vocational Education and Training

The MA VET is a new, modular course of study based in the Post-16 Education Centre which aims to develop a systematic analysis of current developments in both British and European vocational education and training. Recent debates about Post-Fordism will be central to the analysis.

What will you learn from this course?

The course is designed to broaden your understanding of current changes in the provision of vocational education and training linked to your professional practice.

Who are the likely participants?

This course will appeal to lecturers in FE and nursing, teachers involved with TVEI or sixth form programmes, careers and other support staff, LEA advisers and officers and staff from training agencies.

For further details and to arrange an informal interview contact:

MSc ARCHITECTURE

The Department of Architecture offers four MSc Architecture degrees entitled:

MSc Architecture: Advanced Environmental and Energy Studies, concerned with global pollution, building health and the well being of occupants and design for energy efficiency.

MSc Architecture: Computing and Design, concerned with using the computer as part of the design process.

MSc Architecture: Structure and Architecture, concerned with the integration of structural considerations into the design process.

MSc Architecture: Building Process - Theory and Practice, concerned with the development and planning processes and their influence on the built environment.

These courses will be of interest to Architects both fully qualified or wishing to supplement their knowledge and those with RIBA Part 1 only, (as the courses give exemption from one of the two year RIBA Part 2 course). In addition students from other educational backgrounds who have an interest in the subject concerned, are particularly welcome. Courses run from January to December, one year full time or two years part time.
